The Truth We All Face

Facing our hardest Moment

No matter how far we've come...

- Success doesn't erase wounds
- Forgiveness is sometimes incomplete
- Healing is often still unfolding

We all have to admit we were wrong.

The Power of Presence in Branding

- People respond to emotion, not products
- Deep listening builds trust
- Transformation happens when heart meets purpose
- Your role: Brand strategist, heart guide, creative mentor

MyStory begins here

A Five-Year-Old Girl on the Bathroom Floor

- Imaginary friends: “birthday-birthday”
- Locked away, silenced, aching
- The beginning of searching for grace
- “I lost my voice that day.”

Life's Trials and Trauma

bitterness or better?

- Physical trials (cancer, surgeries, chronic pain)
- Emotional trials (rejection, grief, broken relationships)
- But no regrets. Every piece became a teacher
- “You can be bitter or better.”

- From Brokenness to Beauty
 - Mother-daughter sculpture: broken, then whole
 - Pearls added as a symbol of healing
 - Forgiveness and understanding revealed
- “She deserves to live in the light.”

reflections & responsibility

Who do you mirror?

- How do you want people to feel when they hear your story?
- Our reflections hold power
- We must be intentional with the space we hold the Poem.

To my Mother, in heaven

never knew how much I would miss you not until tonight,
as I searched through time and found you, bride-you,
twenty and glowing in a sepia dream,
your hand in Dad's like the promise of forever.

We never had the closeness I longed for,
But tonight, my heart trembles with something new:
Grief wrapped in wonder, mourning folded into awe.
You were young once, with hopes stitched into lace,
Stepping into a married life that would stretch
over five decades.

And though our story was imperfect, tonight I see you,
Truly see you and somehow, I miss you more than I ever thought I could.

Tell Dad I found your photos.

Tell heaven I'm healing.

One memory at a time.

"He heals the broken-hearted and binds up their wounds." - Psalm 147:3

the Final word.

Pearls of Grace.

- Healing starts within
- The way we love ourselves shapes how we love others
- We guide, serve and pour. - not sell.
- When you rise, I know God is near.

Thank You
